The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying a course page on the University of Milan's LMS. The browser tabs include 'Dipartimento di Studi internazi...', 'diginlaw-national-event-prgram...', 'home | Università degli Studi di...', 'DiGinLaw National Event - Regi...', 'DiGinLaw National Event - Regi...', 'Course: Free Movement of Pers...', and 'Università degli Studi di Milano...'. The address bar shows 'mod.srce.hr/course/view.php?id=451'. The page header is green with navigation links: 'Home', 'Dashboard', 'My courses', and 'Edit mode'. The main content area is titled 'Unit 4: Databases and free movement of persons'. It contains a paragraph explaining the unit's focus on the interference between free movement of persons and databases, citing Regulation 2017/458. Below this is a 'Learning outcomes' section. The unit is divided into several activities: 'Introduction to the topics of the unit' (PAGE), 'Download and read the documents provided' (PAGE), 'Guided reading of the Commission Recommendation on guidelines and best practices relating to the performance of border guard duties in the Schengen States' (QUIZ), and 'Test your knowledge on the contents of this unit' (QUIZ). A sidebar on the left lists course activities, with 'Unit 4: Databases and f...' selected. A calendar on the right shows the current date as 24th November 2022. The bottom of the page shows a Windows taskbar with the search bar and system tray.

Unit 4: Databases and free movement of persons

In this unit, you will learn about a specific case in which the interference between the free movement of persons and databases is quite evident: that of systematic checks on persons and documents at the external borders of the EU, provided by Regulation 2017/458. You will read about a) the content and purposes of Regulation 2017/458, b) the relevant legislation on b1) checks at the external borders and b2) limitations to rights stemming from the free movement of persons.

Learning outcomes

Upon finishing this unit, you will be able to describe the essential elements of the discipline of systematic checks at the external border of the Union, and of the limits on the right of entry into the EU, and you will be able to explain the principles governing the relationship between databases and free movement of persons.

Introduction to the topics of the unit

Download and read the documents provided

Guided reading of the Commission Recommendation on guidelines and best practices relating to the performance of border guard duties in the Schengen States

The following T/F questions will guide you in the reading of the Commission Recommendation on guidelines and best practices relating to the performance of border guard duties in the Schengen States.

You are reminded that there is no target score to achieve, as this activity will serve you as a guided reading of the document.

Test your knowledge on the contents of this unit
